I married him

As a child, I often played with my best friend, Peter. In my impression, he was a boy good at study and sports. We went cycling and playing football and basketball together, even when we went into college.

But everything changed when I had a girlfriend. She was clever and pretty, but the important thing was that she was a material girl. She asked me for money every day and I didn't have much savings now. 'I'll dump you if you don't give me more money!' That was what she kept saying to me. I was upset and I didn't want to lose her.

One day, I saw my girlfriend eating out with my best friend Peter and they looked like dating behind my back. I was so angry but I tried hard to control myself. Then I went straight near them and watched what they were doing. I walked quietly near them, but I saw something different. There was a beautiful girl who had short hair and looked like a boy. IT WAS PETER. 'Peter is a girl!' I screamed. Peter was surprised too when I went up to him suddenly.

Peter told me her real name was Anna. We talked a lot of things about our childhood and brotherhood. And I didn't have any clue at all that 'he' was a girl. She lied to me for so many years! My girlfriend was gone because we talked for a long time and we ignored her.

Two months later, I married Anna.
